

Director of Music Julia Tucker holds a Doctorate of Musical Arts in Organ Performance from Arizona State University where she studied with Kimberly Marshall. She also holds a Masters of Organ Performance and Masters of Piano Performance from Syracuse University where she studied with Annie Laver, as well as an undergraduate degree from Auburn University.

An Alabama native, Julia keeps an active performing schedule as an organist, collaborative pianist, and choral singer in the United States and in the UK. She has been serving as an organist since she was an early teenager and has been active as a professional church musician for over a decade. She is particularly passionate about performing and advocating for the music of under-represented composers in the classical canon.

Julia has also been active in American Guild of Organists local chapter leadership for ten years - currently serving as the sub-dean of the Savannah chapter. She and her husband Joel Morehouse reside in the Savannah area with their two cats.
